

[0043] ABSTRACT

[0044] A method and apparatus for providing software compatibility in a processor architecture. In one embodiment, a method involves accessing a control register mask and adjusting a control value for a control register as a function of the control register mask. The masked control value is programmed into the control register.